

PLUTO TRINE NATAL NORTH NODE

When transiting Pluto is making a Trine to your natal North Node, it is also making a Sextile to your natal South Node. Both aspects are considered to be quite favorable as they offer opportunities and easy flow when it comes to reaching our objectives. Life flows in a more positive and promising manner during the period of influence. The Trine is the more favorable one of the two and suggests that there is good luck, easing of any tension that might otherwise have been in place and now is the opportunity to advance in a direction that is very suitable for your path in life. Goals can be reached easier, and you are in a better frame of mind and seem to know where you are headed.

Pluto's action is unavoidable and pushes us to make changes suggested by the houses connected to it in the Astrology chart. Pluto often begins in a subtle manner gradually pushing harder and harder until eventually if you are not abiding to the change, the energies can take control and move you in the required direction. There are no halfway measures with Pluto; but with the Trine, the path forward is very satisfying. Eventually, you will see that the intended route is exactly where you need to go.

Pluto can be forceful especially when you are not wanting to move in the required direction. There can be ego disputes, and, in some cases, we are not totally clear on where our North Node will take us. As a result, there can be fear or anticipation and anxiety of just what that might be.

The North Node is often a direction which we are not accustomed to or do not know, so it can be uncomfortable when we are asked to make these changes. Rest assured however that you will go where you need to go. With the Trine, this likely will work out very well for you and be much easier than you first might have thought it would be.

Worry and anxiety come from our mind's interference, and we should not be overly concerned when the Trine is part of the picture.

The Sextile is also considered favorable and suggests opportunities for regeneration and transition but not without some effort on our part. We can choose to act and then the potential is stronger and likely also advantageous, or we can sit back and do nothing which would most likely make these energies pass by with little to no notice or affect.

Both aspects, the Trine and the Sextile, are what we wait for and after the energy has dissipated some 2 years down the road, we will appreciate the direction that life has taken us. Things shift often in profound ways and meeting new people along the way is often a side-shoot of this combination.

With Pluto Trine Natal North Node be ready for change and learn to adapt because this is exactly what you need for the time being. If you are not open, Pluto may push for this change anyway. Don't fight the inevitable.
