

URANUS OPPOSITION NATAL SATURN

Uranus brings about change and can work in disruptive manners, sudden and often unexpectedly, but it offers an understanding of what frequently stands in the way of moving in a new direction. In this particular case, with Uranus being in Opposition to our Natal Saturn, the need for change may be stimulated from outside of oneself. Others may be the reason behind the need for change and there may be some disruptive forces that seem to prevail likely to force change on us.

Much will depend on the astrological houses involved. For example, if your Natal Saturn is in the second house, security and finances are something that you need to work on and in this case, it could be Uranus (which would be in the eighth house) bringing change because someone that you depended on has deceased or left your life. Now you may be seeking alimony, must look deeply into shared resources or could be part of a settlement through inheritance where perhaps family members are causing disruption.

If Saturn is in the fourth house, then the home and family may be affected. Perhaps your early upbringing was difficult and the family that you grew up with (which may have been strict or restrictive in some way) now is seeing changes due to status, your life's path, your career being adjusted, or your goals and aspirations now going through some changes. This can apply to the home and family you have created as well. Much will depend on your age.

If you are in your late 60's, this may relate to your parents. If you are in your 40's, this may involve your current home and there being some challenges because of changes taking place at work. If we are speaking of a young person roughly 10 to 13 years old, this may mean that your family is moving and those that you are comfortable with, especially your friends, are now going to be out of reach or further away than you might wish them to be.

With Uranus opposition natal Saturn, change is part of the current process. Because you are comfortable with the way things are at this point, does not mean that change is not required on some level. Accepting what now flows your way is the best approach. If you resist, the change may be much more challenging and disruptive.