

TRANSITING SATURN TRINE NATAL NORTH NODE

With Saturn trine our natal North Node, Saturn will often point towards success and achievement along with recognition of hard work and diligence. The Trine suggests not only opportunities but likely easier flow especially when Saturn is in its retrograde cycle. This will suggest an opening when moving ahead with our goals and aspirations. However, as with most aspects of Saturn, this aspect indicates some struggles along the way and perhaps minor setbacks that will seem to get in the way of quick progress. A steady approach and learning the art of compromise and patience will go a long way with this aspect of Saturn.

In some cases, important people come into the picture and offer assistance in some manner that helps us to achieve what we have set out to accomplish. These people may come and then go, or they may become part of the ongoing process assisting along the way. In some cases, these are older individuals or people with experience that can aid in whatever is now taking hold in our life.

Since the North Node has ties to our path and goals in life and is, at the very least, the path we are to follow in this life. The South Node deals with what we have brought with us to help with our North Node objectives, so when Saturn trines our natal north node, it is the perfect time to advance in this path with as little restrictions as possible.

Use some caution but do not let fear or worry stand in your way to working towards your path and goals in life. Saturn trine Natal North Node can be a very productive time with rewards coming your way.
